A missionary met a lion as he was walking from one village to another. The missionary fell to his knees and buried his face in his hands.

Nothing seemed to be happening; the lion was silent. The missionary peeped through his fingers and saw the lion on its knees, its face buried in his paws. The missionary in a trembling voice, "I am praying to be delivered from the jaws of death. But what on earth are you doing?" The lion growled, "I'm saying grace."

Giving a man his physical, a doctor noticed several dark, ugly bruises on his shins, so he asked, "Do you play hockey, soccer, or any physical sport?"

"Not at all. I just play bridge with my wife."

The church choir was putting on a car wash to raise money to pay their expenses for a special trip. They had a large sign, CAR WASH FOR CHOIR TRIP, and on the given Saturday business was very good. But by two o'clock the skies clouded and the rain poured and there were hardly any customers. Finally, one of the girl washers had an idea.

She printed a very large poster which said, WE WASH (then an arrow pointing to the sky) GOD RINSES. Business boomed!

Although he was a qualified meteorologist, Hopkins ran up a terrible record of forecasting for the TV news program. He became something of a local joke when a newspaper began keeping a record of his predictions and showed that he'd been wrong almost three hundred times in a single year. That kind of notoriety was enough to get him fired.

He moved to another part of the country and applied for a similar job. One blank on the job application called for the reason for leaving his previous position. Hopkins wrote, "The climate didn't agree with me."

Now, here's the plan. We cross pasta with a boa constrictor. We get spaghetti that winds itself around the fork.

Somebody has well said that there are only two kinds of people in the world - there are those who wake up in the morning and say, "Good morning, Lord," and there are those who wake up in the morning and say, "Good Lord, it's morning."

The teen-aged beauty was telling a friend that she was really worried about her mother. It seems she's always fatigued from staying up all night long.

Her friend asked, "What's she doing staying up all night? At her age, that's not good at all."

The girl replied, "Waiting for me to come home."

A man walked into a restaurant in a strange town. The waiter came and asked him for his order. Feeling lonely, he replied, "Meat loaf and a kind word."

When the waiter returned with the meat loaf, the man said, "Okay, so where's the kind word?"

The waiter put down the meat loaf and sighed, bent down, and whispered gently, "Don't eat the meat loaf."

A woman is worried about an older woman, a widow, who lives in the apartment next door. She hasn't heard anything from her for a few days. So she tells her son, "I want you to go next door and see how Old Mrs. Smith is."

A few minutes later, the boy returns.

"Well, is she all right?" the mother asks.

"She's fine, but she's annoyed with you," he says.

"At me? Whatever for?"

"Well," says her son, "Mrs. Smith told me it's none of your business how old she is."

From the very moment we were born, we were dying. So why sweat the small stuff? Learn to accept things for face value and enjoy life. Cherish every moment as though it were your last because this is your last time you will see today.

As he was driving home from work, a man in a rural community was stopped by a local police officer.

The motorist, informed that he had failed to come to a full stop at a stop sign, was handed a ticket.

"Don't I get a warning?" he protested.

The officer replied, "Sure. Here's your warning: If you don't come to a complete stop next time, I'll give you another ticket."

Porky, a 'with-it' teenager boy continually challenges his rather conservative father by wanting to have his ears pierced or his hair cut or dyed in an unusual way. His dad always adamantly refuses to buckle under to pressure and constant begging of his son.

One day, out of the 'clear blue' Porky asks, "Dad, would it be okay if I had S-T-U-D shaved into the back of my head?"

The father shocked, thought it over and calmly replied...

"Sure! But only if you add -Y to the end of it."

Tell a man that there are 400 billion stars, and he'll believe you. Tell him a bench has wet paint, and he has to touch it.

A young woman was walking on the beach and came upon a young Tern not yet able to fly and seemingly had lost its parents. She picked it up and was carrying it with her when she came upon a young man reading from a book of verse. He traded her the book for the bird and she said he had taken a tern for the verse.

He went in the Pier Cafe and the Chef was stirring the batter for sourdough bread. The young man traded the tern for a jar of the dough.

He said the chef had taken a tern for the batter.

Living would be easier if a person showed as much patience at home as they do when they're fishing.
